A four-fold investigation was under way today into the gun duel in Bickerstaff and Norway streets, South Bay, in which Patricio Jacob Grosberg, of the Black Bay station was wounded, in the left shoulder before he was brought down James Hunt, Black Bay apartment house janitor, with a bullet in the back.

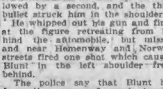

There was an under arrest in connection with the shooting, including Hunt, who is in the hospital.

Continuing state of the shooting declare there was had blood between the officer and his victim that they engaged in an argument before the shooting which caught Hunt in the left shoulder from behind.

Grosberg declared he was going toward a parked automobile when a bullet whizzed by him followed by a second, and the third bullet struck him in the shoulder.

He whipped out his gun and fired at the figure retreating from behind the automobile, but missed and near "Homenway and Norway" streets fired one shot which caught Hunt in the left shoulder from behind.

The police say that Hunt has been the cause of much trouble recently, and had threatened to "get" Grosberg because of many remarks.

Noted Men to Serve on Commission for the Study of Crime

AFTER reading a signed editorial by William Randolph Hearst contending that the cure for criminality is not by punishment "but only by education and the practical application of the principles of Christianity," Justice William Harmon Black, of the Supreme Court of New York, suggested a commission to study the reasons for the increase in crime, its effects in its treatment and the remedy.

Justice Black proposed, should be formed by the Hearst newspapers enlisting the services of men in their cities with the expert knowledge that would fit them to serve on such a body. The plan was enlarged to take in several cities where there are no Hearst newspapers. These eminent men have consented to serve:

26 ALIEN SAILORS JUMP SHIP AT NEW BEDFORD

New Bedford, May 17 (A.P.).—Twenty-six members of the crew of the Italian ship, the Verde, jumped ship in the anchorage here on May 17.

Only the navigator and one sea cook remained. The other crew members had been ordered to shore by the local police.

Edward J. Oliver, port captain in the harbor, said the ship was under way when the crew jumped.

He now faces a fine of $25,000 for permitting aliens to enter the country illegally.

The vessel leaked all the way across the Atlantic and was kept afloat by constant work at the pumps. Since the Fairhaven's arrival here May 2 she has been making seven feet of water in her hold every 24 hours, necessitating steady pumping by the crew. Fear that the schooner would sink at her mounting leaks, helped to save her from a wholesale desertion.

200 ON STALLED CARS MAROONED IN TUNNEL

More than 200 passengers were marooned in the East Boston tunnel between the Atlantic avenue and Devonshire street stations, when a trolley train became disabled. The train, bound for Boston square, had just passed the Atlantic avenue station when it became disabled.

The passengers settled back in their seats and waited for more than 20 minutes in the dim light of the tunnel before the disabled train got underway. After proceeding a very short distance the train again stopped and the crew worked for more than a half hour before restoring service.

NORGE BADLY DAMAGED IN LANDING AT TELLER

Nome, Alaska, May 17 (A.P.).—The little Norge was considerably damaged following its landing at Teller.

The worst score of men available there were insufficient to prevent the huge dirigible from whirling about in the wind following its partial deflation.

The Norge was viewed by this correspondent after a dash from Nome in forty-five minutes in the first airplane to make the flight from Nome to Teller.

Between the damage done by the wind following the landing and the dismantling process, which is well under way, the Norge looked a sorry sight.

"We flew at heights ranging from 1,000 to 7,000 feet on the trip from Alaska from the Pole," he said.

"Much fog was encountered and we were unable to take our bearings. We decided to stop at Teller after it was evident, although we still had fifteen hours' fuel supply."

After making a dash for the outside world were futile for a long time.

BOY HURT WHEN CAP EXPLODES

Playing with dynamite caps in the street, seven-year-old Lawrence Hopkins of No. 3 John street, Newton Center, was seriously injured when one cap exploded and particles of it struck him in the chest.

He was taken into his home, near which the accident occurred, and Dr. M. M. Leve, who was summoned said he would recover.

With a group of little rhytmates, he was trying to explode the caps by throwing rocks at them, according to the police, when the cap exploded, blowing the boy's head back to the ground and frightening the others into flight. Some of the other boys got hurt.

Mario Corvo, son of No. 24 John street, told Patrolman Martin Stanton and James Kelley of the Newton police, who were sent to investigate, that he found a box of dynamite caps in a shed on the property of Dominic Maloney of No. 17 John street, the authorities reported. bailey, rose a hole in the left side of the door and shattered several windows of the building and of neighboring houses.

Only servants were in the building at the time of the explosion. They at first attributed the noise to the bursting of a tire and did not realize a bomb had exploded until police arrived within a few minutes.

A police investigation was begun immediately.

Sacco Case Has Caused Several Bombing Plots

Bombs were exploded in seven capitals in 1921 in anti-American demonstrations caused by the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti, and it was generally believed that bombs sent to Ambassador Herrick in Paris and the American consular general in London had their source in the same agency, although counsel for the convicted men denied this belief.

Bombes Paris and London, thrown were sent by radicals in Havana, Peru, and Buenos Aires to the American consular and diplomatic representatives.

Two days after a hand grenade exploded in Ambassador Herrick's Paris residence, a bomb exploded in the street outside a hall where Parisian Communists were holding a meeting "in protest against the American government's capitulation and the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti." Police and explosives were injured, many were arrested, squadrons of French cavalry charged through the mob and for several days on quarters of the city was under military rule.

A close watch for bombs has several times been established at Dedham, Courthouse, the State House, the lobby of the Supreme Court, justice at the courthouse and other places here during the protracted proceedings in the case.

MISSING SALESMAN

In LEHIGH, ITALY

Springfield, May 17.—First intimation of the whereabouts of Robert Allen Nottman, New York bond salesman, who disappeared Feb. 13 and who has been sought by police throughout the country, to his letter from Lehigh, Italy, to his mother, Mrs. E. Nottman, was given by his movements since Feb. 13. It was indicated that he planned to sail for home in a few weeks. A $1,000 reward had been offered for information about him.

The boy and his father were inseparable "pals," according to other members of the family, and a slight nervousness from which the boy was troubled increased after his father's death so that he could not sleep at all.

On advice of physicians his mother took him to the hospital, where it is believed he can be quickly cured.

NORGE BAILY DAMAGED IN LANDING

Magy of the huge girders in the Norge's frame were bent and warped, and Colonel Umberto Nobile, inventor and commander of the dirigible, announced these would be discarded.

All facts are being carefully segregated, and after a careful survey Colonel Nobile will determine what parts will be returned to Norge.

Already the natives at Teller have been raiding the Norge's wreck for souvenirs. Careful guard will be kept to prevent anything of value from being lost.

This will not be difficult, however, as most of the natives stand in awe of their monster which dropped into their midst so unceremoniously.

Colonel Nobile revealed to the writer that the Norge had a fifteen-hour supply of gasoline left when decision was reached to make the descent at Teller.

Several members of the expedition have signified their intention to make a future Arctic flight and Lieutenant Oscar Omdahl, one of the four who arrived here with Captain Amundsen, announced today he planned to make a solo exploration of Arctic regions his life work.

Omdahl was the hero of the unexpected landing made by the Norge at Teller, Alaska.

He leaped to the ground from the dirigible and seized the morning rope and then rallied the few persons remaining in the village to assist in drawing the big airship to the ground. Most of the natives fled to the hills at the approach of the "bird monster."

BRIGHT OF SUCCESS IN MARRIAGE

Ring Strik Her Wedding to the Reckless Man She Promises to Cure

Fitchburg, May 17.—A story of rare devotion was revealed here today, when the details of the wheel-char marriage of Charles Hussey and Miss Ruth Ronan, both of No. 190 Summer street, became known.

A serious illness which struck Hussey down on the eve of his projected marriage, postponed the wedding, but it failed to dim the romance or dull the affection of his bride. After giving up her entire time to nurse Hussey, Miss Ronan secured a marriage license, summoned a clergyman and married Hussey, while the latter sat propped up in a wheel chair at his home.

RING TELLS SECRET

A wedding ring on the finger of the bride today betrayed the secret, wedding, which took place a little over a week ago.

Hussey's illness has brought about a temporary paralysis, but has robbed him of the use of his limbs. While lying in the duties of nurse, Miss Ronan went quietly ahead with the duties of a wife. Her husband, she said, "I will stand by him. When he is well, I will be his wife. I shall never regret the step that I have taken. If it is God's will, I shall nurse him back to health."

100 Y Girls Told to Find New Quarters at Once

PUT OUT IN COLD

GRL. HURT IN ACCIDENT, BY AUTO, THEY ASK WIVES

Later Found at Home in Lynn After Escaping Trip to the Hospital

While ten-year-old Thelma Guest of Lynn, victim of an automobile accident, was being rushed to the hospital by Sergeant John McKen, the officer was witness to another crash, and as he was making an arrest, the little girl cheated the hospital by going home.

There her mother, Mrs. Aurelia Guest, of 13 Park street, Lynn, called the family doctor. The girl was badly bruised about the body and legs.

Mrs. Guest and her daughter were crossing Central square when machine struck Thelma. The driver, making his report to Sergeant McKen, proceeded to take the little girl to the hospital.

As the party passed Lloyd street on Washington, a car operated by Hugh Dineen struck a trolley. This accident arrested Dineen's progress under the influence of liquor.

In the meantime Thelma did not recall the idea of a hospital and proceeded calmly home.

Won by Count

Several of the girls told Mrs. Grandin that the Warren street building will be turned over to the new owners next November. This building has been sold to Bonnetts Brothers, who will conduct a theatrical boarding house there.

Question after question was shot at Mrs. Grandin and Mrs. Fox by the girls, who plainly showed their indignation at the manner in which their cherished home had been disposed of before another had been arranged for them.

One of the girls present had contributed from $1 to $10 to the drive for $10,000 the Y. W. C. A. was started last March. This for the basis of many questions. The girls said they were given to understand when they contributed that the money would be used to erect a new boarding home in which they would be housed.

CHARGE MISREPRESENTATION. Mrs. Grandin said the new building will be an administration hotel, recreational center and a hotel for transient women. She said the prices for rooms there would be higher than those of the girls at the Warren street home which closed several of the girls told Mrs. Grandin.

FAIR AND WARMER? YES, WEATHER MAN SAYS
Generally fair and warmer weather is predicted to replace the week-end storm which, after leaving 2.11 inches of rain in Greater Boston, passed out to sea early today.

Clouds will obscure the sun tomorrow, according to the weather man, and occasional showers may fall, but there is nothing on the map to indicate an immediate repetition of the week-end rain.

Population was so great on the Cape that the men-at-arms fired first in that direction, the preliminary shot. South Coast reported a total of 2.10 inches and 2.10 inches was registered at Annapolis.

Bobbed a la Jap

Dr. A. C. Conrad, pastor of Park Street Church, when approached by Miss Gladys Brown and Miss Louise Todd, who live at the Warren street home, addressed his conversation and spoke over radio on the subject. He said he did not think it was necessary to sell the Warren street home, as it was virtually self-supporting, but if it had been necessary the organization should have provided another home for all the girls.

He spoke of the work the organization has done and mothers have considered it safe to send their daughters to Boston to work or study, knowing they would be properly housed at the Y. But with girls being forced into private lodging houses that element has disappeared, he said.

As a result of the indignation meeting resolutions were adopted and sent to the national headquarters in New York asking for a special hearing.

ROMANCE GIRL TAKES POISON

Declaring she was "sick and tired of living," Maria C. Laskey, twenty-two, of Tremont street, South End, locked herself in a room at the Rockwood Manufacturing Company, building, 89 Bennington street, East Boston, today and gulped the contents of a bottle of poison.

Other girl workers at the factory heard her screams of pain and got help.

She was given first aid and rushed to East Boston Relief Hospital, where Dr. Arthur G. Holland said she was in a critical condition.

According to Mrs. Mary Leaven, who conducted a lodging house at 100 Tremont street, Miss Laskey took a room there on Saturday afternoon, having been introduced by a youth, who gave his name as Harold C. Mann.

"I told me they were to be married tonight," said Mrs. Leaven. "I have not seen him today."

confined to changes in court procedure. Others to means of punishing the criminal and still others to treatment of potential criminals. As a matter of fact a broad view of the problem comprises three matters:

- 1 The criminal in the making and before he has committed an overt act.
- 2 The sureness of swift and speedy, yet humane, justice after the act has been committed.
- 3 The treatment of the criminal after he has been convicted, particularly with a view to preventing him again becoming a criminal after he has been released from custody.

To neglect any one of these matters is to ignore a link of vital importance, but the treatment of one only will not solve the problem. Through a crime investigation commission — if it should be possible to obtain such a standstill aid in welder these links together. Certainly, the end to be achieved is worthy of the effort.

I assume that the work of the Hearst Commission suggested will not conflict with the work of those agencies which are working effectively with special phases of the problem. The Washington judicial council, for instance, is dealing with the problem of criminal court procedure. Its findings would be valuable for the commission which could and would, I sup-

With such united action and support public officials are more likely to take the facts and with practical proposals based on scientific investigation, we have every right to expect that the state will adopt the method of handling criminals and the reduction of crime.

By WILLIAM E. DEVER
Mayor of Chicago.

I read Mr. William R. Hearst's editorial with great interest, and while I do not care at this time to comment on the advisability of abolishing capital punishment, I heartily agree with the thoughts advanced by him for remedying the crime situation.

Mayor Dever served eleven years as an alderman. He served two terms on a Superior Court bench for a total of twelve years. He was a jurist both in the criminal and civil branches. Later he became an appellate justice. While holding that exalted office he was elected mayor of Chicago by a large majority.

according to their family standard, much less to make a home for a family. Many—it seems to me to many—poor horses are ruined by our system in an effort to make them family horses.

Just as we are obsessed with the idea that "book learning" means education, so we too often have preached the idea that "being a Christian" means being a Christian life. Both, to my mind, are detrimental to real character.

There is a very real danger that ruined the Southern negro in the standards of his aristocratic masters. What was the result? The loss of vocational training for his race, did more for the Southern negro than all the million dollars of misguided philanthropists. What we need as a part of the remedy to cure crime, or to give the negro a chance to be a Washington of all races is to prepare both men and women by the best and greatest of the home-makers and home-keepers, rather than to become idle, vocational school graduates.

It is a notorious fact that we Americans have the most efficient business organizations in the world. We have the most efficient in the biggest and most inefficient.

Crime, already existent, has become a reformed. The accomplishments of the medical profession rest, not so much on the prevention of any preventive measures.

Our homes, our educational and social systems, are the greatest that always need our best thought and attention. Our high standard of living, our modern conveniences and other luxuries, are affecting our serious, sober, and healthy.

Our school systems in the past have been the best in the world. Boys and girls reared to high standards of life, educated to do something better than to do nothing. The Nationalist organization called the American Government most of the time. The Nationalist organization called the American Government most of the time. The Nationalist organization called the American Government most of the time.

and eventually bank robbers, hijackers, bootleggers and painted ladies. The men are not the husbands or paramours; more men who are busy regulating the affairs of the state than families rather than regulating the balance of the world; fewer men who are concerned with laws and more certainty of punishment for their breach, rather than the fact that they are punished; more sense and less sentiment in the making of an administration; more business methods in the administration of the Government.

Improvements through which the American people are accomplished are the American schools, the professions, the politicians who follow a public sentiment at all times.

IN his letter to Mr. Hearst, suggesting that the services of an expert in each of the cities in which Hearst newspapers are published should be enlisted "for the purpose of studying the reasons for the increase in crime, the defects in handling it and the remedy for it," Justice Black said:

"The conclusions of these experts on crime could be embodied in a pamphlet or book, which should supplement the tremendous daily circulation of your various newspapers."

SINCERE students of criminology have long recognized the necessity for a movement that would correct the failure in the administration of criminal law.

In organizing and providing for a commission to make a scientific study of the situation, Mr. Isaacs is not only satisfying the bees of criminologists and a long-suffering public, but he makes visible the only pathway out of the present wilderness. The necessity for a scientific and intelligent examination into the failure of the machinery of justice to function successfully is generally recognized. To every accurate observer it is apparent that, the man, politics has been substituted for science, intolerance for intelligence, and waste for economy, in handling crime. The administration of criminal law is in a tragic condition.

The reconstruction and rebuilding of our present penal system will be a colossal work, which cannot be finished in one year. But history will record its final results and will acclaim wonderful rewards for it.

The impetus Mr. Hearst, the thinker, has given the movement through his educational power of his publications and facts of other great thinking minds of the age acquiesced in his thought—even before he expressed it publicly—proves he has not a vague, elusive dream. His theory will become an actuality.

Mr. Hearst I look upon as a Moses, with the promised land of his splendid charity just on the horizon. I shall do everything in my power to aid him in his commission to lead.

For those who have reached the conclusion, and who are nevertheless in the necessity of a reasonable and intelligent attitude toward offenders, the statement in said, but it contains ground of hope. It is said, because society must admit the terrific price it is now paying for indifference and neglect. It contains a ground of hope, also, in the promise of the possibility of liberation from the present scourge of waste, stupidity and cruelty.

Judge Shaughnessy has tried 10,000 criminal cases as District Attorney of Milwaukee County and 6000 more as Municipal Judge. He has become famous in the Middle West as an exponent of speedy justice of criminals, but he has always been a firm believer in probation for first offenders. The reform of adding criminals is his first doc-

For two and a half years Frank Murphy was chief assistant United States District Attorney at Detroit winning every trial he prosecuted including the huge war graft case. By WILLIAM F. BROENING.

THE principles of humanism and Christianity which Mr. Esters has outlined in his editorial as the proper viewpoint for attempting a cure for crime are those which I myself sought practically to apply while State's Attorney of Baltimore city. It should be apparent to all thinking men that, persons applying vengeance as a cure for crime, society is striking at the effect rather than the cause. By education and other positive means, society should seek first to eradicate the cause, and then, should punishment ultimately be necessary, it should be meted out in such a manner that the criminal realizes it is a corrective measure rather than a strict application of the old law of "An eye for an eye."

W. F. BROENING.

I shall be glad to serve on such a commission as that suggested by Supreme Court Justice William Harmon Black of New York. I feel that much good will come from the work of such a commission if it can focus the public mind on the fact that the time has come when society must realize that it owes a duty to itself. And that duty, as I see it, is one of making each individual realize that he is an integral part of society, that laws are made not to punish him but to protect him, and that the mere passage of a law cannot and will not do the work that can be done only by education and strict discipline.

William F. Keating knows the problems of poverty. One of a family of ten, he learned a trade, worked by day and studied law at night. When he was elected State's Attorney of Baltimore he defeated a popular Democrat in a Democratic city. He announced he would be a prosecutor and not a persecutor. He invited a thousand Big Brothers to help a thousand boys who needed help. He gave much time and effort to salvaging young offenders. His work led to his nomination for Mayor and he became one of the most popular in the history of Baltimore.

ALL the years of my public life I have been concerned with the human equation. First, as Superintendent of Schools in San Francisco, I was interested primarily in character building. Second, as Superintendent of the District of Columbia, I was important than crime punishment. Both are necessary under our present social system.

The emphasis must be put on the former, whether at home, the school, the church and such social agencies as may be devised to meet the ever-changing conditions of this advanced age.

Respect for regularly constituted authority, habits of industry, development of character through education and moral training are factors in character building that are

From this experience, covering practically a quarter of a century, I have concluded that the work really worth while, and of lasting value, was that done in the first period, through the medium of the schools.

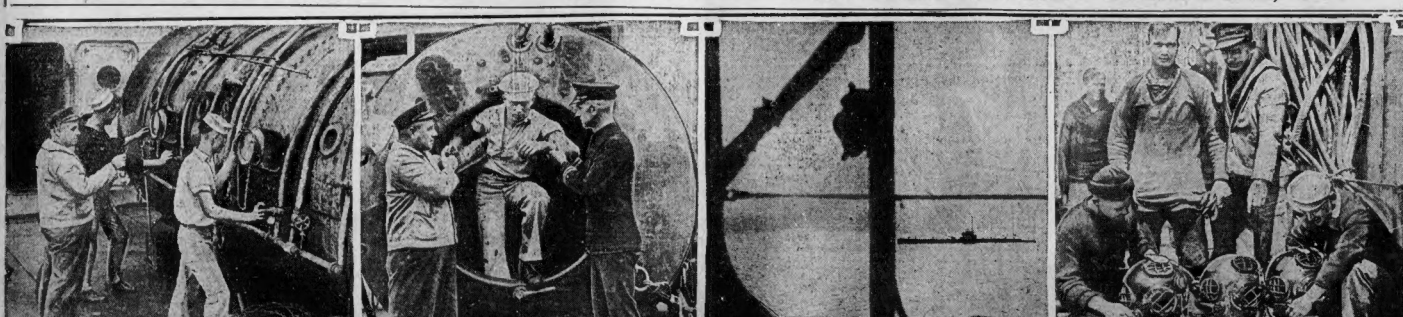

Washington, May 17.—"Mr. Hearst and his newspapers are doing society a great service by instituting a study of crime, thereby paving the way for wiping it out."

Mrs. Mina Van Winkle, president of the International Association of Policewomen, head of Washington's women police and recognized as one of the foremost women authorities on crime, thus epitomized her belief that prevention of crime at the source, rather than punishment of the offender, is the method to be used to eradicate it. She said:

"Just as prevention is the goal of medical science, so should it be the goal in dealing with crime.

"And there can be no prevention without a thorough sociological study of the causes, such as Mr. Hearst has invited a commission of noted authorities to make."

Once more today the townsmen of Wakefield are going to the polls to elect the clerk and the assessors, ranking their own municipal plant and buying gas from Malden.

In today's balloting, the third referendum in little more than a year, the clerk and the assessors' free ballot, it is hoped to settle the question beyond doubt. The polls were opened at 9 a. m. and will close at 5 p. m.

Many months ago the Malden Gas Melroe Gas Company had been authorized to sell gas to the town of Wakefield with gas at a price which would be a fair return for the use of one fraction in the town.

The town had no other gas supply, but the price was so high that the town was forced to buy gas from Malden at a price which was 10 cents per cubic foot higher than the price which the town was paying for gas from Malden.

The first vote was taken April 1, 1890, and the result was a vote of 100 for the Malden offer and 1609 against it. A recount made in 1891 showed that the vote was 100 for the Malden offer and 1609 against it, but one illegal vote was claimed, making a tie.

JURORS PROBE BIG BEER PLOT

Cleveland, May 17 (A.P.)—Operations of a beer syndicate in a dozen States with western Pennsylvania as the source of supply were under investigation by a Federal grand jury here today.

Scores of witnesses, including officials of three railroads, were here for questioning by A. E. Bertrando, district attorney, who called the syndicate one of the largest beer and alcohol combines in the history of prohibition.

The railroad men, including H. H. Shepard, general superintendent of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western; H. J. Mulhally, division superintendent; D. L. & W. and agents of the Lehigh Valley and Lackawanna and Erie railroads.

Rig between St. Bernard and Wilkesbarre are alleged to have operated with bootleggers in Cleveland, Buffalo and other cities through subsidiary rings. More than a dozen breweries may be involved.

VETS' HOSPITAL SHOWS HALTED

Because of the approach of warm weather the semi-monthly entertainments conducted at United States

Veterans' Hospital, West Roxbury, by the Boston Evening American have been discontinued until another season.

"The boys at the hospital are very grateful for the entertainments furnished them during the past season by the Boston Evening American," said Miss Katharine P. Leonard in discussing the matter. "The programs have been splendid. They were chosen with great care. Nothing of an objectionable nature was ever shown. If the management of the Boston American knew how much the ex-service men still undergoing treatment at the hospital really appreciated the shows that have been given them I am sure they would feel well repaid for the effort made."

um in Richard Harding Davis' popular story, "Ranson's Folly," new film at the Washington at Olympia. "Dick" has never looked better and his portrayal of the evasive, devil-may-care officer, who is always getting into scrapes in his search for excitement, is exceptionally vivid. The story is laid in the colorful atmosphere of a Western army post in the adventurous 30's and is replete with thrills.

Dorothy Mackail, who plays the part of Mary Cahill, the postmaster's daughter, also gives a delightful performance. This is the fourth time that Miss Mackail has appeared with Mr. Barthelmess, the last time being in "Shore Leave," which won such popular approval.

Sidney Olcott, the director, has done an excellent piece of work with "Ranson's Folly." Pictorially and dramatically, the picture is a success and offers Barthelmess one of the most pleasing roles he has ever had. Shorter screen subjects and a bit of vaudeville complete the program.

Wealthy Town Infielder Being Watched by Big League Scouts

As the schoolboy baseball season starts along on the wheel of progress, Eddie McGrath, Brookline High's hard-hitting infielder, is making a name somewhat louder than a general alarm time does out in the "sticks." Critics who have watched Speedy McGrath's performances at bat and in the field have been forming a list of the boys who are being watched by the big league scouts. McGrath has looked upon his school days with a great deal of respect.

The wealthy town representative does everything naturally. A year ago McGrath batted for 704, a mark that probably will not be equaled for many years to come. He stole 13 bases, hit six home runs, and was a four-time doubles hitter. In addition to gathering the most honors this season indoors, McGrath is continuing on the diamond just where he dropped his spurs last season. He has hit .300 in 100 at-bats and has a batting average of .300. McGrath is being watched by the big league scouts. McGrath is being watched by the big league scouts.

The famous humorist, writer and lecturer accepted "with pleasure" when asked by the director of the "Evening Hour" to be the honoree for the equally famous comedian.

De Wolf Hopper has been friends for years. When the actor was in the radio studio with Hopper, he was delighted. "Floss" has exclaimed, "It will be a great event."

Cobb has spoken to radio audiences a number of times, but Hopper is making his first professional appearance before the microphone. He was broadcast, but he has never before attempted to entertain via radio.

De Wolf Hopper will have to say in his introduction of the star comedian of so many of the best known American light opera, comic opera and musical comedies, probably will be a masterpiece. Considerable of the talk, however, will be with reminiscences and anecdotes of the stage careers of Hopper and his contemporary actors of the past generation.
